Water Restrictions May Be Relaxed in Town Soon

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

The Town of Londonderry is looking at a slightly less stringent water restriction policy for summer of 2017, while acknowledging the fact that drought conditions still persist.

Assistant Town Manager Lisa Drabik presented the amendment to the October 2016 "restriction on outside water use" in the April 3 Town Council meeting.

Last year's ordinance called for a mandatory ban on the watering of all residential lawns in Londonderry, due to "the severe and extreme drought conditions and the impacts there from facing the residents of

Town Council to Mull Expanded Vets' Tax Credit

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

The Londonderry Town Council will explore expanding the Veterans Tax Credit to more veterans.

In its April 3 meeting, the Council discussed RSA 72:28-b, a state law passed last year that enables municipalities, if they wish, to expand the tax credit for armed services veterans beyond the current parameters.

What they offer now

The town currently offers the standard veterans' tax credit according to RSA 72:28, which offers a $500 tax credit to the following:

Every resident of this state who served not less than 90 days on active service in the armed forces of the United States in any qualifying war or armed conflict listed in this section and was honorably discharged or an officer honorably separated from service; or the spouse or surviving spouse of such resident, provided that Title 10 training for active duty by a member of a national guard or reserve shall be included as service under this subparagraph;

(b) Every resident of this state who was terminated from the armed forces because of service-connected disability; or the surviving spouse of such resident; and

(c) The surviving spouse of any resident who suffered a service-connected death. V. Service in a qualifying war or armed conflict shall be as follows:

(a) "World War I" between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918, extended to April 1, 1920 for service in Russia; provided that military or naval service on or after November 12, 1918 and before July 2, 1921, where there was prior service between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918 shall be considered as World War I service;

(b) "World War II" between December 7, 1941 and December 31, 1946

Council Addresses Concerns on Stonehenge Road Project

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

In its April 3 meeting, the Londonderry Town Council tried again to allay the fears of residents concerned about a recent Planning Board vote.

In the March 8 meeting the Planning Board addressed the issue of The Residences at MacGregor Cut, a workforce housing project proposed for land on Stonehenge Road. The board first had a tie vote, 3-3, but after a suggestion by Councilor John Farrell, they re-voted and member Al Sypek changed his vote to a "no" vote.

A Motion for Reconsid-eration was on the agenda for this past Wednesday's Planning Board meeting, which occurred after press time.

In the Public Comment portion of the meeting, resident Keri Stanley said in her understanding, a tie vote is the equivalent of defeating the motion. She asked, "Who has the authority to call for a revote?"

Farrell clarified that a tie vote does not qualify as a defeated motion, but that the board still has to motion to deny or not to deny the project, and also has the option of postponing discussion to another meeting.

"I made the recommendation so the chair could decide what to do," he said.

Planning Vice-Chair Mary Wing Soares chaired the March 8 meeting in the absence of Chairman Art Rugg.

Town Manager Kevin Smith amplified, "A tie

Fire Communications Plan Back on Drawing Board

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

A task force from the Londonderry Fire Department will continue to explore its options, after a recount of a March 21 vote failed to garner the required two-thirds majority.

On the ballot, the second warrant article asked voters to raise and appropriate $2,740,936 to upgrade the town-wide communications system, including police, fire and public works. The article was in two parts, with $1 million to be raised through bonding and $740,936 through a capital lease. The final tally was 1,415 yes, 995 no, 31 votes short of the needed majority.

Fire Chief Darren O'Brien, whose department had headed up the project, asked Moderator Bob Saur for a recount, which was held Tuesday, March 28.

"I was doing my due diligence," O'Brien said. "As a department head, it was my responsibility after everyone put so much into the project." Two of his officers, Battalion Chief Mike McQuillen and Lt. Jeremy Mague, did all the research for the three departments, met with vendors, and presented the plan publicly.

While the recount garnered proponents an additional five votes, it still fell short, with another 26 needed for the required majority, O'Brien said.

But O'Brien maintains that the upgrade is still necessary, and he said he will be talking with the new Town Council and with Town Manager Kevin Smith about what to do next.

"We are going to look at something for the next budget cycle," O'Brien said.

O'Brien theorized that voters may have been overwhelmed by the scope of the project, especially in a single warrant article. One of the options he and his team will be exploring is splitting the cost up into two warrant articles, he said. This will also work if they end up taking money out of fund balance, O'Brien said.

Londonderry is doing well financially due to increased industrial and commercial development. "If we have another good year like this one was, maybe we can get the money next year," O'Brien said.

One option would be setting up a capital account and adding money to it each year, he said.

"We are not giving up,"

O'Brien said. "We can't give up—by 2020 our equipment will no longer be supported. We can't keep Frankensteining-it. The safety of the community is at risk."

Moderator Bob Saur said the recount was done before a "board of recount" including himself, three Town Councilors, Town Clerk Sherry Farrell, and seven ballot clerks. Both paper and electronic ballots were recounted, he said.

O'Brien expressed his thanks to those who participated in the recount, saying, "A lot of people put a lot of work into it."

Young Child Found, and Arrest Made at Mountain Home Estates

On Thursday March 30, at about 11:35 a.m. the Londonderry Police Department received a call from a concerned citizen at the Mountain Homes Estates on Fieldstone Drive saying an unattended, 3-year old child found.

Local officers responded, located the young child, and began a search for the child's parents.

After conducting an exhaustive search of the area and sending out the child's picture via social media in an effort to identify the child and his family, we received a tip that led us to the child's father, Joseph Killgren, age 35, of Londonderry.

Officers then located and spoke with Killgren soon thereafter. He was then taken into custody after being charged with one count of Endangering the Welfare of a Child, a class A misdemeanor.

Killgren was held on $5,000 cash bail. His arraignment was scheduled for Friday, March 31, at the Derry District Court and the child was released to the custody of his biological mother.

For Your Entertainment

In light of recent discussions in the community about Comcast's cable services in the towns, we thought we would voice many peoples' dissatisfaction with it, by taking a look at the history of television and how things have progressed to where they are now.

Before cable TV made its way into American homes, television was actually a free service, programming was paid for by advertisers, and was meant to be a way to inform and unite families (sounds like a local paper we know...except the paper's advertisers are non intrusive to what people are reading). Today, viewers pay the providers for those enhanced services, but still have to sit through the all the endless same commercials repeatedly that pay the channels produce the content that they enjoy, with an excess of repetitive commercials that seem to overstay their welcome.

You may ask why? Well, it's the agencies that create one to two ads that repeat in a loop. They tell companies it is by repetition that consumers buy their products. Yes and no. While the ads do stick with the viewer, after a while it can get annoying can end up turning a consumer off.

Nowadays, it almost feels like there is more advertising than programming, and people are moving more towards on-demand services, streaming, YouTube and other mediums with little to no advertising, or paying a quarter of what it costs to have cable with tons of ads, to have the convenience of a service with supposedly little to none. However, this too can become overrun with ads. Even with recorded programs, fast forwarding through ads is disabled so viewers are forced to wait them out.

Even still, while you get what you pay for with cable TV (more channels, etc), and while your payments cover the cost of delivering the signals to your home, it can still feel insulting to, in a way, pay twice for a service. Particularly when many only use 3% of what is provided, and the cost of said service seems to be rising and the quality of service diminishing, and for only one option to be available, not just for cable, but for internet and phone as well.

Some people have felt that because Comcast is seemingly the only provider to get these services from, the company sees itself as too big to fail, and almost doesn't care that its customers are inconvenienced by the continually rising costs for the same service. There also almost doesn't seem to be any reason for the price increase, furthering the insult.

But is there a way around it? You could try a streaming service as an alternative for cable and be met with less ads and less cost, but then what do you do about obtaining the internet to provide you with that service?

There are in fact other options out there for internet, and as we move towards streaming, perhaps the need for variety in cable will diminish with that. For now, we've seen how things have changed, and we shall see how things continue to change.

Because at the end of a long day or week, all we want to do is sit down unwind and be entertained and not interrupted over and over with the same ads that you can not escape from no matter how much you pay even if you try. Maybe these big companies should rethink how they are getting the customers!

Voter Fraud

To the Editor:

We were under the impression that voters registering the same day as the election still had to provide proof of New Hampshire residency. However, after reading the NH1 news article last week about voter fraud, we learned differently.

The article states that in last November's election, 5,903 first time N.H. voters registering on election day used an out of state license as their ID. 40% used Massachusetts driver's licenses. People with out-of-state licenses vote on Election Day in N.H. with no actual proof of residency and their vote will be counted. The article states that non-NH college students can vote here in NH as long as they don't vote in their home state. Who polices that? Why can't non-N.H. college students vote by absentee ballot in their home state? In Massachusetts, if you're not on the voting list, you can't vote. And you must register 20 days before the election. I think Massachusetts voter identification requirements promote less fraudulent election results.

The article stated that N.H. voters with no proof of residency have to sign a legal document confirming they live in NH. It also stated that the Sec. of State's office mails letters to people signing those affidavits. After last year's presidential election, 458 of them came back undeliverable. That was down from 4 years ago, when 1193 came back undeliverable! How many were delivered but the homeowners accepted delivery and threw them out because they didn't recognize the addressee?

Last November in Londonderry, the line for same day registration was out the door. How many of these first-time voters actually lived in this state? I now think President Trump's claim of voter fraud in NH has merit.

On March 30, the NH State Senate passed a bill redefining the domicile requirements. It reads in part, "A person present in the state for temporary purposes 'shall not gain a domicile for voting purposes,'" The bill holds that "temporary purposes" means a tourist, a temporary visitor, short term worker, renting a place for less than 30 days or volunteering or working to influence voters in an upcoming election. NH college students will still count as a resident.

Even with this very liberal definition of residency, including out of state licenses still being accepted as a valid ID, the NH Democratic Party Chairman Ray Buckley said the bill is an unconstitutional burden for legitimate voters. How? Zandra Rice Hawkins, executive director of Granite State Progress, called it a voter-suppression bill, according to the Union Leader. Who's being suppressed?

The Senate passed the bill on a 14-9 party line vote. To his credit, Secretary of State Bill Gardner, a Democrat, backed the bill. He understands that NH residents, regardless of party affiliation, want an honest election.

This bill now goes to the House and then the Governor for his signature. To preserve the integrity of NH elections, we ask that residents contact their representative to support this bill.

The Rule of Law

To the editor:

Donald J. Trump is our President. Affairs are messy, turmoil reigns, and political knives are being wielded. Now is a good time to remember our beginnings, the establishment of an entirely new form of government in this world, especially the esteem, the focus, to which our Founding Fathers put on Law. The foundation of the intellectual mindset and the political belief system of the Leaders of the American Revolution (1775-83) and the Makers of our Constitution, ratified in 1789, included the works of Baruch Spinoza (1632-77), John Locke (1632-1704), and Montesquieu (1689-1755) to name only three.

Note, this from George Havens, The Age of Ideas (1955:153), in Charles-town SC in 1750 the Library Society had an English translation of Montesquieu's Spirit of Law (1748). And so did Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, James Wilson, and others. Our Founding Fathers were readers, and thinkers, and makers of history.

Quoting from Matthew Stewart, Nature's God (2007:372-3), the Law: The most important general principle of democracy is that it involves the rule of law. In a democracy, says Spinoza, "the welfare of the whole people, not the ruler, is the supreme law," and only through the law can a democracy "organize the state so that all its members, rulers as well as ruled, do what the common welfare requires." Locke agrees that the "first and fundamental positive Law" in any legitimate government is the creation of the legislative

Londonderry High Class of 2018 Helps Easter Bunny

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

Jeff Cieslikowski has never been in the hospital over a holiday, but he experienced it last year when his grandmother was a patient over Thanksgiving. He and the family ate the holiday meal with her, and the staff did their best to accommodate, Cieslikowski said, adding, "But it was very quiet."

A concern for people hospitalized over a holiday, particularly children and teens, has led to the Class of 2018's latest service project, collecting Easter basket items for the Children's Hospital at Dartmouth-Hitchcock. The drive closes this Friday, April 7, and by assisting The Bunny, these LHS juniors hope to bring other kids a bit of holiday cheer.

Cieslikowski said the idea stemmed from a smaller project this class had done as freshmen. "We threw that one together at the last minute," he said. "We heard about the need and knew it was a great cause."

They took last year off, but came back this year determined to do a drive and make a difference. Cieslikowski, class president, is heading up the drive along with Carina Pento, vice-president, Aidan Crowley, historian, and Luke Wyman, treasurer.

History teacher Erin Donovan is their adviser, but, she said, "They have done all the work."

The students are collecting small toys such as Matchbox cars, Disney and Pixar DVDs as well as films for older kids and teens, stuffed animals, warm socks, blankets and coloring books and crayons. They are especially interested in gifts for other teens, noting that people don't always know what to give those in their age bracket.

They are leaving the children's families to provide them with candy, Cieslikowski said.

But almost anything else goes, as long as it's appropriate. For sanitary reasons, the hospital requests that all donations be new, except for gently-used DVDs.

At first the response was slow, Cieslikowski said. "It was hard to get the word out." He networked with Richard Zaccilli and Paul Dutton, principals of Londonderry Middle School and North School respectively, and they spread the word among their students.

Some LHS classes had competitions, with incentives to bring in items. Their own adviser, Donovan, wasn't exempt from this, Cieslikowski said. "For every World History student who brought in an item, she gave extra credit," he said.

"She never gives extra credit," one of the other officers said.

While they didn't have the tally yet from the other schools or other LHS classes, the donations from the Class of 2018 lined a wall in Donovan's classroom. "This is a brand-new teddy bear," Pento said. There were other stuffed animals, including an orange My Little Pony guaranteed to make a sick child smile.

While some of the DVDs were dated, they were still appropriate, Cieslikowski said. And some were up-to-the-minute, like a Finding Dory still in its packaging. They had a cardboard box two-thirds filled with Matchbox cars. "One boy brought in almost all of those," Cieslikowski marveled. The group plans to assemble a few baskets, for display reasons, he said. But most of the items will be boxed and taken to the hospital, where the staff will distribute them according to need. This isn't the Class of 2018's first foray into charitable collections. They have also helped with the Blue Angel program from St. Jude Church, adopting a family for the holidays and fulfilling their wishes, Cieslikowski said. And it won't be their last. As they sorted items, Pento said she hopes the group will do the drive again next year, and that other classes will take it up. "We hope it will become a regular thing," she said. The Class of 2018 will accept items for the Easter Basket collection through this Friday, April 7. For further information or to donate, e-mail londonderryclassof2018@gmail.com.

power, or the power of making laws. The Boston Declaration of 1772 follows Locke quite literally on the point: "The first fundamental, positive law of all commonwealths or states is the establishing of legislative power." In a collective of naturally equal individuals, moreover, there can be only one law for all that is in conformity with reason and aims for the common welfare. As Locke puts it, there must be only one set of rules "for Rich and Poor, for the Favourite at Court, and the Country Man at Plough," and all such rules must be "confirmable" to the "Eternal Rule" of the law of nature or reason. The Boston Declaration is once again Lockean to the letter: the law must apply equally "for rich and poor, for the favorite at court, and the countryman at the plough" and must conform to "natural reason."

Natural reason: the reasoning power endowed upon us by our Creator (and see the opening words in the second paragraph of the Declaration of Independence).

And here we are, affairs are messy, turmoil reigns, and political knives are being wielded. Politicians: don't use the law to enhance yourself or your own political party alone. Politicians and fellow citizens: keep your cool, be restrained with the political knives, and do what you can to help keep the Ship of State upright and steady on its course. Realization of our best ideals is still ahead of us. Let us keep our cool.

Black Joins District Office Staff as Assistant Superintendent

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

Daniel Black has done a little bit of everything, and now he's doing it in Londonderry.

Black was formally introduced as the next Assistant Superintendent in the March 30 School Board meeting.

Black will take over the duties of Assistant Superintendent Scott Laliberte, who will become Superintendent July 1 on the occasion of Nathan Greenberg's retirement.

Black, currently an assistant superintendent in Keene, was raised outside New York City. He attended Vanderbilt University and received a bachelor's degree in English. He also received a master's in Public Policy from Harvard University and a Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study in Educational Leadership from Plymouth State University.

He began teaching in Donna, Texas, near the border with Mexico, as part of the Teach For America program. He worked as a principal for a charter school in New York City, and worked his way north, serving as an educational policy analyst in the Office of Administration and Finance for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"I like working with kids, and I had great teachers growing up," he said in explaining his career choice. "I wanted to give back."

Though his degree is in English he's taught in a bilingual program in Texas, and also taught middle-school Science.

His wife is from Nashua and works in the Bedford-Concord area. The couple settled in Amherst, an easy commute to his Keene job.

Black said he was attracted to the Londonderry job for a combination of factors. "What separates a good school district from a great school district," he said, "is a push for excellence, combined with the formation of a great team. I found that here."

"We felt he was the most appropriate fit for our district," Laliberte said of his successor.

Black will formally assume his duties July 1

In other business, Dan Lekas was elected chairman of the board and Jenn Ganem was elected vice-chair.

vote means the motion doesn't pass."

Resident Debra Paul asked, "If the Planning Board decides to leave the vote the way it is, what will the town do about defending the position of the board?"

Chairman Tom Dolan reminded the audience that discussion at this point is hypothetical. "The developer could do nothing," he said. "Or they could take legal action and in that case, their attorneys would engage with our attorneys."

Dolan added, "The town has no legal representation at this point because no action has been taken."

The developers, First

Londonderry LLC, first submitted their plans under an ordinance that has since been replaced. Paul pointed out, "At the end of the day, the town of Londonderry should not have to suffer because of a poorly-worded ordinance."

"We do not advise the Planning Board or the ZBA," Dolan said. "These developers are 'grandfathered' under the old ordinance."

Former Planner Tim Thompson wrote the original ordinance, Farrell said. It was more financially friendly to the developers.

Smith said a couple of workforce housing projects got in under the former ordinance, but that since the ordinance was changed, "We have not had one application."

Taking a stand

Farrell reviewed the steps the Council has taken to halt the project, including offering to buy the parcel with Conservation funds. "We also suggested townhouses instead of apartments, and we also asked if they could sell the property to another developer," he said. "We presented four or five scenarios. They were not interested."

Dolan said, "The Council authorized a team to approach the developer with alternate uses."

Farrell said, "We instructed our attorney to go to their attorney and say, 'Give us a number and we'll go for a vote.' But they refused to give us a number."

Dolan clarified the roles of both the Planning Board and Town Council, saying, "The Council can try to meet the community's preference. The Planning Board has a different role. Their job is to evaluate the plans, and see if they're in compliance with town ordinances. The Planning Board is not there for community preferences."

The Planning Board's

role is more black-and-white, Dolan said.

Paul referenced a community meeting with the developers, before they even went to the Zoning Board. "We asked him, 'Is there anything else you can do with that land?' and he said no. That is where the animosity from the neighbors is coming from," she said.

Paul said, "The residents feel they have no say. It's their town too."

While the Council is not in support of the development, it has to walk very carefully, Dolan said. "We have to preserve our ability to objectively hear appeals."

Londonderry." Ignoring the ban would result in a tiered system of a warning; a $250 fine; and finally a $500 fine. Per state law the ban can only apply to residential watering, but the town has asked commercial firms to voluntarily comply.

Town Manager Kevin Smith and Drabik have been monitoring the drought situation with the New Hampshire Department of Environmental Services (DES), and have learned that Londonderry will suffer from "Severe" drought conditions this spring and summer, compared with last year's "extreme" drought conditions. To that end, the town will impose a mandatory water restriction of an "odd-even" nature.

Drabik explained, "Residents with house numbers ending in an odd number (1, 3, 5, 7 or 9) will be allowed to water their lawns on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays, while those with house numbers ending in an even number (2, 4, 6 or

8) will be allowed to water their lawns on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays."

The fines are the same as they were last year, Drabik said, and the town is requesting that non-residential property owners comply on a voluntary basis.

The state ordinance is RSA 41:11-d and the town ordinance is Ordinance 2016-07A.

The Council waived the first reading of the ordinance. A second reading and public hearing is scheduled for the April 17 Council meeting.

Message in a Bottle Makes its Way Across the Pond

MELLISA BETH RUIZ
LONDONDERRY TIMES

In the days of instant communication through text messaging, snapchat, twitter, and other social media platforms, hand written messages are seen few and far between.

With all of these immediate means of reaching friends, family, and even strangers available, many millennials probably couldn't imagine sending a message any other way than electronically.

However, as if directly out of a 1990's movie, one Londonderry girl decided to write a note to anyone and send it out to sea.

Zoe Dieffenbach, now a senior at Londonderry High School, along with her sister, Sage, and their friend, Haley, sent out a hand-written note in a bottle in June of 2015 out of Jenness State Beach in Rye, New Hampshire, not knowing where it would turn up, or if it would turn up anywhere at all.

When asked why she had decided to send the message, Dieffenbach answered, "Me and my sister kind of wanted to try and see if it would work. We never expected an answer back."

But nearly two years later, to her surprise, Dieffenbach got a text message to the number she had included on her note, letting her know that her message had made its way to the Shetland Islands far north of Scotland. Although the original print had faded to the point of almost invisibility due to sun exposure, the recipient was able to make out the contact information and reached out to its sender.

"I was...shocked because I didn't expect an answer, and for it to actually work was really cool!" Dieffenbach said of the experience.

When asked her opinion on the way communication has changed, Dieffenbach said "You don't expect that stuff anymore, so it's new and exciting when you get mail. When you get a text, you text every day, so it gets boring."

Dieffenbach said that she has not since heard back from the recipient from the Shetland Islands after answering their initial text, but it's safe to imagine that receiving a message in a bottle from thousands of miles away wasn't something that person saw every day, and now both recipient and sender will have a story to tell for generations.

Hi, We found a bottle message today sent by you in June 2015. It has managed to cross the Atlantic ending up on the Shetland Islands in the far north of Scotland. The writing was a bit faded but I think I have the right number.

That's awesome! Yea u have the right number, we sent that off Jenness beach, New Hampshire in the United States of America.

The surprise response from the Shetland Islands north of Scotland two years after the original message was sent.

RSA 72:28-b opens the tax credit to "A person shall qualify for the all veterans' tax credit if the person is a resident of this state who served not less than 90 days on active service in the armed forces of the United States and was honorably discharged or an officer honorably separated from service; or the spouse or surviving spouse of such resident, provided that Title 10 training for active duty by a member of a national guard or reserve shall be included as service under this paragraph; provided however that the person is not eligible for and is not receiving a credit under RSA 72:28 or RSA 72:35."

Something to Think About

Council Chair Tom Dolan said, "Last year's Council took up this discussion. The tax credit for Londonderry veterans is currently $500, for veterans who served during certain dates."

Dolan said one of the issues facing the current Council is that they don't know how many veterans will apply for this, and how it will affect the other residents' taxes.

A change currently being discussed in the Legislature would allow the town to phase in the tax credit, before it got to the full $500, Dolan said. The law as it currently stands does not allow phasing-in.

"In the near future we will discuss if we want to extend the tax credit to all veterans, and at what rate we want to phase it in," Dolan said.

Town Manager Kevin Smith said that the amendment has passed the Senate and is currently in committee in the House. If the House passes it without further amendment, it should be on the governor's desk sometime in May, he said.

One local veteran, Deanna Mele, spoke to the credit, saying she served during peacetime but would be eligible if the town adopted the new guidelines. She urged the town to get an inventory of how many more veterans would qualify. She suggested having people fill out a short questionnaire when they are paying their property taxes.

But, Mele said, it depends on how much the town is willing to offer. "If it's only $50, you might as well not do it," she said, because it would be canceled out by the rise in her property taxes.

Local Navy Pilot, Hero "Just Did His Job" During WWII

KATHLEEN D. BAILEY
LONDONDERRY TIMES

Eugene Shannon didn't collect the medals he won in the Second World War. He wasn't overlooked by the Pentagon – he was just too busy getting on with his life.

Shannon will receive his medals in a ceremony Thursday, April 6, at 7:30 p.m. in American Legion Post 27, Sargent Road, Londonderry.

Shannon and his wife Mary live in an apartment at his son Paul's Londonderry home, and they took the time one evening to reminisce about his war service.

Shannon, born in Lawrence, Mass., was raised in the Boston area and graduated from Charlestown High School. After graduation, the young man went to the local enlistment office along with a friend. His friend got accepted, but Shannon was sent home with a Section 8 rejection. "They said I had a 'bad heart,'" he recalled. But Shannon really wanted to serve, and he got a second opinion. "The doctor asked me if I really wanted to go in," Shannon said. "I could have stayed out." But the call to serve his country was too strong, and he followed the doctor's advice, which was, "Don't smoke and get plenty of rest." Shannon made a second attempt to enlist after a couple of months, and this time he was accepted.

He got assigned to radio school in New York City, and the top 10 percent of the graduates were offered a chance to learn to fly. "That sounded like it would be exciting," Shannon said. He trained as a pilot in Memphis and Florida. The Navy placed qualifying pilots in a pool and drew out of that pool, according to Shannon.

He went to Rhode Island and was assigned to Torpedo Squadron 15, Shannon said. In February 1944, Torpedo Squadron 15 was ready to deploy. But just before the weekend they were to deploy, he was promoted. He stayed in Rhode Island, and Torpedo Squadron 15 went on to the Pacific.

He was reassigned to Torpedo Squad 81, and finally deployed to the Pacific. Torpedo 81 saw combat in the Philippines, making strikes against Manila, Clark Field and Subic Bay.

Was he afraid? No, Shannon said. "The old juices get flowing," he explained. "You know what you're there for, you know what can happen."

What was going through his head? "Keeping my eyes open," the practical Shannon said.

Though war movies usually have at least one character who doesn't want to be there or even freaks out, Shannon saw little of this. "The guys in my unit didn't do a lot of grumbling," he said.

By the time they got to combat, they knew what they were doing, Shannon added. "You are programmed. You know what you're supposed to do, you know what your crew

Eugene Shannon shows his wife Mary some of the features on the model of the plane he flew as a Navy pilot in the Second World War.

They were united by a common cause, according to Shannon. "We knew we were fighting to save freedom, and to save our country."

"Japan and Germany thought they could overwhelm us," Shannon said, adding, "Needless to say, they couldn't."

His missions included strikes against Iwo Jima, Guam, Okinawa, Formosa, Hong Kong and Saigon, along with anti-shipping strikes in the South China Sea.

Shannon was on an island called Tianen, in the Marianas, when he learned of the surrender of Japan. They were getting ready for an invasion of Japan, he said, and "We knew it wasn't going to be pretty. We knew how they treated their prisoners." But the ship he was on, the USS Princeton, turned around abruptly and headed back toward the United States.

"We all knew something was up," Shannon said, though the Navy "didn't tell us anything."

He was happy the war was over, and ready to get on with his life, he said. He moved back to the Boston area where he met his wife Mary, a friend and bridesmaid of his sister. It took him two years to find a decent job, he said, and during that time he lived with his parents, "as was customary."

His son Paul said, "Four to five million men came home. The factories were closed after the war effort, and it took a while for these men to find work."

It was the same story for most of his comrades, Shannon said. "They wanted to get home and live their lives. But at the same time, they were proud of what they did and proud of our country."

He and Mary married in 1951 and had two children, Paul, with whom they make their home, and Christine, an educator. They have four grandchildren, two from each offspring, and one great-granddaughter, he said.

He ran several small businesses, including one which relocated to Hudson because of Massachusetts taxes. He used his war radio experience for that start-up, from which he eventually retired and which is now doing $40 million in sales. He has lived in Londonderry for 25 years, he said.

Shannon kept busy out of work, obtaining his private pilot's license and flying for 15 years. He still skis and hikes in the White Mountains, and sails with family and friends on Lake Winnepesaukee. He is an avid reader, often studying books about the war and sharing them with his son.

Regarding the country's treatment of veterans, he said he personally has no issues. "He finally went to the VA in Manchester two years ago," his son Paul said. "He had a hearing problem, and they set him up with hearing aids. It was handled very professionally."

In fall of 2016, the elder Shannon began to ask about his medals. Paul contacted Sen. Jeanne Shaheen's office, and set up the mechanism to receive them. "Dad had the original paperwork from 1946," Paul said. "The request was verified by the Department of Defense."

The family decided a ceremony was in order, and they worked with the Legion to set one up. Does he have any regrets? "Not at this stage of life," Shannon said. "Life is what it is. It takes strange turns. You may not like them, but it's amazing how they impact you."

If he's aware of anything, it's how fragile life is. Shannon recalled one strike his crew was ordered to do, on an aircraft factory in Tokyo. "It was almost adjacent to the emperor's palace," he said. "Our instructions were, 'If you hit the palace, don't come back.'" He paused for a second and said with a grin, "Well, I'm back."

Local Business Making Local Honey for Over a Decade

MELISSA BETH RUIZ
LONDONDERRY TIMES

“It’s a good hobby, if you don’t mind getting stung all the time,” quips Richard Matckie, owner of Kendall Pond Honey Co.

Matckie has been keeping bees and making pure, local honey and other bee-sourced products for about 11 years. He was first inspired to do so by a customer he had at his primary business, Mainline Plumbing and Heating, who had used bee sting therapy as a treatment for her Multiple Sclerosis.

“She’s since passed away, but she was amazing,” Matckie remarked, recounting the times he had watched her take the bees from a jar to sting herself on her arm. He explained that the venom from the sting would help to alleviate the pain she experienced from the disease.

After that Christmas, Matckie’s sister had bought him his first hive, bee boxes, and colony of bees. He enrolled himself in a beekeeping program that year and has kept educating himself since, as he explained that a good beekeeper must be up-to-date on the changes in information.

Matckie said that this time of year, beekeeping is focused on making sure that the bees’ food storage from the winter is at an amount that will get them through the end of the season, and in manipulating the colony to cut down on swarming, or the overpopulation of the colony. He explained that swarming results in a large portion of the hive’s population leaving to form their own colony, but not before gorging on most of the hive’s honey reserves, which in turn results in less honey available to sell.

He explained that the way to look out for swarming is to check for “queen cells” in the hive, as colonies preparing to swarm will build these special segments and will put “royal jelly”, or special food for the queen there as a means for the queen to be nourished so as to produce more and more bees. He said that swarming can be avoided by “checkerboarding” the hive, taking frames and moving them around, placing empty frames and filling them with larvae and more honey, or by splitting the hive, which involved locating the queen separating her from the rest of the colony, and finding a new queen for that side to slow down production.

Matckie said he is able to create two varieties of honey: Spring and Fall. He explained that the Spring honey is made with the pollen from Spring flowers, and the Fall honey is made from the pollen of flowers that bloom in the Summertime. Both honeys help to alleviate the effects their respective season’s naturally occurring nasal irritants for those who suffer from seasonal allergies.

Matckie spoke about the endangered status of bees, saying that the decline in population is due in some part to populations being effected by mites, but in a much larger part by their habitats and food sources being devastated by humans.

However, he said that the issue could be combated by taking the time to plant a flower or tree that bees use as a source of food, such as sunflowers, asters, goldenrod, southern crabapple trees, black willow, and tulip trees, just to name a few.

When asked how he felt that bees help to make a better place, Matckie said, “They pollinate more than half of our food, they’re the ones responsible for making our food. They provide us the sweet form of sugar that’s a lot healthier than regular, granulated sugar.”

Just one ounce of raw/local honey contains 20 different vitamins (including B2, B3, B5, B6 and C), 18 amino acids, loads of antioxidants, and has strong antibacterial, antiviral, and antifungal properties. To be sure that the honey is of this healthy caliber, make sure that it is labeled “Raw” or “Local Honey.”

In addition to the sticky, sweet, salubrious substance, Kendall Pond Honey Co also sells blocks and candles made of beeswax, honeybee pollen (an extreme form of pollen which helps people who ingest it build up a tolerance to seasonal allergies), pure pollen (which also helps people boost immunity to allergens and is found in honey), and bee propolis, a substance made by resin taken by bees from leaf buds and barks from certain trees, which is then mixed with wax, honey, and enzymes. Propolis has been used by humans for its antiseptic, antimicrobial, and detoxifying properties for centuries, and has been found to ease ailments such as sore throats and toothaches.

As far as expanding this venture into the future, Matckie explained that his Plumbing and Heating business is his main focus, and reiterated that Kendall Pond Honey Co and beekeeping was a hobby, which was subsidized by the sale of the products.

“I’d like to stay focused on staying small and producing good quality (products) than volume,” He said.

For beginner beekeepers and those interested in keeping bees, Matckie’s advice was to monitor bees for mites, which he said were the biggest problem affecting the local keepers. He explained that the mites populate 2:1 against the honeybee, and thus they can potentially take over the colony. They harm the bee by damaging their wings, and weighing on their skeletal system. He also reiterated the importance of monitoring the colonies for swarms and taking preventative measures against it.

Lady Lancer Lax Squad Has A New Mentor, High Hopes

CHRIS PANTAZIS
LONDONDERRY TIMES

New Londonderry High School varsity girls' lacrosse coach Scott Walden has a resume which would likely impress even the most jaded lax veteran. So saying he brings a huge amount of knowledge and skill to his new post in replacing Bob Slater would appear to be something of an understatement.

Walden, who coached the LHS junior varsity girls to a JV state title last spring while also serving as a varsity assistant to Slater, was a standout in high school, college, and professional lacrosse before moving to coaching.

The Windham native played his high school lacrosse in New London at Proctor Academy before moving on to a record-setting, Hall of Fame career at Plymouth State College.

A three-time Cox Conference All-Star, the new LHS varsity mentor scored at least 40 goals in each of his four seasons and became the only mens' player in school history with more than 100 goals and 100 assists.

Walden busted onto the collegiate lax scene in 1993 by scoring 45 goals. He followed that up with 42 goals and a school-record 52 assists as a sophomore for a single-season record 94 points. He also broke the NCAA single-game scoring record with 21 points, tallying nine goals and 12 assists in a win over Norwich.

Walden netted 40 and then 49 goals over his final two years at PSC, finishing in the top six in the nation in goals, assists, and points as a senior. He broke the New Hampshire school's 22-year-old career scoring mark, finishing with 176 goals and 323 points with his 147 assists ending up just three shy of the school mark. He also led his Panthers to three winning seasons in those four years, and was selected to play in the prestigious East-West Senior All-Star Game.

He went on to play professional lax for the Boston Blazers of the National Lacrosse League, and Plymouth State inducted him into their Hall of Fame in 2006.

His coaching experience has had him coaching boys on the junior varsity and varsity levels at Nashua High School South, and after an absence from lacrosse for several years due to work commitments he worked with Manchester high school and Kearsarge Regional High (Sutton) contingents.

"I started coaching my daughter in youth lacrosse until she was at the U-13 level, and some Londonderry varsity girls saw me coaching my daughter's team and they got with coach Slater and he asked me to coach the JV team. I had the time finally with work and took the job," said Walden.

That 2016 Londonderry High junior varsity girls' team went 25-1 and won the JV state tourney, and Walden served as a valuable varsity assistant to Slater as well.

"Working with coach Slater was a great experience for me last year, and I know I have big shoes to fill," he said. "My philosophy has always been to assess the talent and base what we run off that. We have some amazing starting talent, but we're lacking some depth, so time of possession is something we have focused on. Our offense has a lot of motion, setting up the right match-ups. Our defense and goalie are our strengths, and we'll lean on them this season."

The varsity team which Walden inherits went 11-8 last spring to finish eighth in tough Division I.

The attacks include seniors Camille Lamont and Erika Tsetsilas and juniors Courtney Baharian, Katie Derhak, Shannon Fraser, Meghan Jackes, and Allie Marsh.

The midfielders are seniors Hannah Hagearty, Kiersten Hoglund, and Emily Holland, juniors Jackie Baumann, Victoria Kelly, and Katelyn Nartiff,

Deep Lancer Hardball Crew Aiming to Have a Strong Campaign

Veteran Nick Salcito and the Londonderry High baseball squad step into the 2017 DI season hoping to go as far as possible. Photo by Chris Paul

CHRIS PANTAZIS
LONDONDERRY TIMES

There are unquestionably reasons for longtime Londonderry High School varsity baseball coach Brent Demas and fans of his Lancers to slide into the forthcoming 2016-17 season with real optimism and excitement.

After posting a .500 record of 10-10 with a ninth place Division I finish at the close of an up-and-down campaign last spring, coach Demas' 2016-17 crew returns a handful of battle-tested starters and four other ball players with varsity experience, and the Lancers have also added a slew of newcomers who you can bet will be waiting anxiously for their opportunities to contribute to the Londonderry cause.

One of the biggest and most pleasing factors from coach Demas' standpoint - a Vermont native who understands perfectly well how hard it is to comfortably complete a high school baseball season in the Northeastern United States - is the fact that the Lancers boast no less than 10 players who can pitch.

"We have a deep roster this year. Most of this group has worked exceedingly hard with (head LHS athletic trainer) Michelle Hart-Miller and it's already showing," said Demas. "We have a good amount of live arms on the pitching staff and a balanced defensive/offensive game. As long as everyone on the roster understands and executes their roles to the best of their ability, then I feel we will be in the conversation. It's a fun group of guys, and the coaches feel that will translate to a positive atmosphere and, in turn, to success on the field."

Londonderry's returning starters include seniors Jonny Meskell (catcher), Xander LaPlante (left fielder), and Nick Salcito (pitcher/shortstop), and juniors Ricky Perry (second base) and the wildly-versatile Nate Sullivan (shortstop/pitcher/outfielder).

The other varsity returnees include senior Jackson Leavitt (third base/pitcher) and juniors Anthony Ferraro (pitcher/first base), Anthony Pirolli (pitcher/first base), and Andrew Ross (outfield/pitcher).

The squad's junior-heavy crew of newcomers includes 11th graders Jake Bolduc (OF/2B), Kyle Dickson (OF), Shane McNamara (3B/1B/P), Travis Peabody (P), Dylan Walsh

(OF/P), Matt Minton (OF), and Ethan Sullivan (2B). Sophomores Reece Manor (middle-infielder/P) and Jack Dingman (C/OF) are expected to swing between the LHS varsity and junior varsity teams.

When looking at the 2016-17 makeup of Division I, coach Demas is pretty definitive regarding which teams he feels will vie for top places in the standings.

"Exeter and Bedford will be the top teams in Division 1," he said. "Exeter has the arms and just added the reigning D-2 player of the year, who moved into the district this off-season. Bedford lost Connor Lee, which is tough, but they are also loaded up offensively."

The Lancers officially get their season rolling on Monday, April 10, at home against the rival Pinkerton Academy Astros.

Starin Returns to Lead Lancer Boys' Volleyball

CHRIS PANTAZIS
LONDONDERRY TIMES

With his return to the Londonderry High School boys' volleyball program this spring, respected veteran coach Dave Starin is now in charge of all things volleyball at LHS.

And Starin sounds more than a little intent on keeping the Lancer males on solid competitive footing in inheriting a contingent which went 8-10 last spring and finished eighth in the state.

"We are focused on building our program through a tough work ethic and holding everyone accountable for their actions," said the coach. "We are going to be active members in our community and represent Londonderry in the most positive manner possible."

The Lancers, who officially open their campaign next Monday the 10th by playing host to the Salem High Blue Devils, return six players from the 2016 crew including

Newcomers to the Lancer squad, who coach Starin is still working diligently to place in the most productive positions, include seniors Ryan Pitard, Nick McCann, Jackson Lycars, Nalen Iarrobino, and Ian Candela, juniors Abhy Patel and Logan Agrella, sophomores Alex Crutcher, Patrick Cohen, and James Buttafuoco, and freshman Jacob Cullen.

As he acclimates himself to New Hampshire high school boys' volleyball again, coach Starin feels as though the toughest teams this spring will include the defending state champions from Hollis-Brookline, the 2015 champs from Timberlane High of Plaistow, and Windham.

Passion For Basketball is a Constant for Londonderry Family

CHRIS PANTAZIS
LONDONDERRY TIMES

In some families, a love of camping, hunting, fishing, or hiking is a shared passion among all or nearly all of the members. Some clans get into auto racing, and still others grasp a love of traveling or cooking. But for the Constant family, which moved into Londonderry from Manchester nearly 25 years ago, it's basketball which lights all the lamps.

The Constant males - dad Paul and sons Dave, Joe, and Matt - have immersed themselves deeply in the sport and, in the cases of Paul and eldest son Dave, even made the sport a professional endeavor.

The elder Constants are the founders and directors of Team Saints, an advanced basketball program which they started back in 2012 as The Southern New Hampshire Saints which now boasts some 15 teams consisting of 145 players covering grades four through seniors in high school.

Seventeen-year-old Joe and 15-year-old Matt both play for Saints' teams, with older brother Dave somehow coaching all 15 of the organization's contingents while maintaining his roles as the its vice president and coaching director. His dad Paul is the Saints' president and director of operations.

Constant family patriarch Paul's sports coaching experience is pretty extensive and includes work with local groups like the Londonderry Wildcats' Pop Warner football organization and the Londonderry Recreation Department's basketball leagues.

It was his involvement with the Derry-based New Hampshire Fastbreak basketball organization which would eventually help lead to the formation of the Saints' program.

Dave Constant, who recently turned 30, had a disappointing school basketball experience in Londonderry and ended up having a highly-noteworthy high school hoop career at Trinity High School in Manchester under the tutelage of Frank Alosa, a wildly-successful New Hampshire basketball figure who also had a few run-ins with controversy over the years. But Alosa ended up being a pivotal and beloved figure in the hoop history of Dave Constant, to say the very least.

"Frank Alosa was the first person to give me a chance in basketball," said Dave.

And the results of that chance ended up being a truly superb Trinity career in which the eldest Constant boy played on a 2003-2004 Trinity varsity squad which was ranked nationally and went on to win the Hooters' Holiday Shootout in St. Petersburg, Fla. that winter.

Constant and his fellow Pioneers made it to the New Hampshire Interscholastic Athletic Association tournament semifinals that season and got as far as the NHIAA tournament quarterfinals the following season.

Dave went on to an excellent collegiate hoop career for former Plymouth State coach Paul Hogan at the New Hampshire Technical Institute, and in the wake of that success Constant - who also played hoops for Frank Alosa with the renowned Granite State Raiders' AAU team - moved on to coaching.

His coaching work has included time as a junior varsity head and varsity assistant at Pembroke Academy and at countless camps around the Granite State.

Dave later joined his dad Paul with the New Hampshire Fastbreak club - coaching an elementary school team out of the organization's home base at the Derry SportsZone - and when former Salem High varsity hoop coach and Londonderry School District assistant superintendent Andy Corey sought to disband that three-team organization which he had been helming, the two elder Constants took it over and turned it into the Southern New Hampshire Saints in 2012.

"Basketball is life in our house, and my dad and I were going to break away (from Fastbreak) and start our own program. But it worked out well when we were able to just take over Fastbreak," said Dave.

Team Saints is now absolutely flourishing, with Dave working a punishing 65 to 70 hours per week during most of the year and dad Paul providing invaluable support behind the scenes.

The younger Constants, however, are very much involved with the shooting and dribbling and boxing-out of on-court action, with 17-year-old Joe recently having finished his sophomore season at Trinity and 15-year-old Matt creating all kinds of buzz in Rhode Island schoolboy hoops by recently agreeing to play his high school ball at the Saint Andrew's School in Barrington.

Joe's 2016-17 high school hoop experience wasn't anything he'll particularly want to remember for too long as he was a member of a Trinity varsity contingent which went 0-18. But the 17-year-old small forward showed some strong stuff for his Pioneers' crew, and he had family members in the stands supporting him for all 18 contests.

He and his elder brother - and Saints' coach Dave - have a relationship which is nearly pressure-free because Joe has a lower-key approach to basketball than his older brother and his younger sibling.

"Joe is one of the nicest, most fun-loving dudes I've ever met," said Dave.

Young Matt Constant, on the other hand, is all about basketball from the dawning of the day until the last lights go out, and the combination of an incredible work ethic, love for the game, and talent have gotten him placed among Basketball Spotlight's top 100 prospects in the graduating class of 2021.

Matt, who is three-quarters of the way through an academically-intensive year at Nashua Catholic Regional Junior High after having previously attended the Londonderry Middle School, has starred at point-guard for the Expressions of Boston AAU team and for his eldest brothers' Saints.

"He's one of the most self-driven, self-motivated people I've ever seen," said Dave of his baby brother, who pays meticulous attention to his nutrition while also working incredibly hard at basketball and his studies.

The youngest Constant has a list of goals taped to the mirror in his bedroom, and he keeps ticking them off. Future goals include becoming an All-American in the New England Preparatory School Athletic Council - to which the Saint Andrew's School belongs - as well as the Player of the Year in that conference.

The Londonderry native is also driven to play Division I college basketball one day, and then get selected in the National Basketball League draft.

With the unmistakable competitive fire which he has in his belly and coming from an exceptional hoop atmosphere, precisely nobody should be surprised if the youngest Constant keeps his family's basketball tradition rolling strong for many more decades. In the Constant household, basketball is life, and it will certainly continue to be.

Battle-tested LHS Softball Crew Aims to Create Better Memories

Senior pitcher Ali Nelson and her twin Andi are two of the major assets which a title-hunting Londonderry High softball squad has this spring. Photos by Chris Pantazis

CHRIS PANTAZIS
LONDONDERRY TIMES

The 2017 Londonderry High School varsity softball squad consists almost exclusively of veteran upper-classmen. And unfortunately all of those returnees have had the final game of their 2016 season seared into their memories, giving them nearly an entire calendar year to relive and lament it.

So it's anything but a stretch to say that veteran coach Wayne MacDougall and his Lady Lancers will do everything they can to make sure that this spring ends on a much higher note than last spring did.

The 2016 Lady Lancers went 14-6 and claimed the number four seed in the tough Division I tournament. But in a perfect example of the statement

"That's why we play the games," the Londonderry team's title hopes were dashed by a 3-2 upset loss to the number 13 Keene High Lady Blackbirds at Londonderry High in round one of the tourney.

Even now, nearly 10 months after that season-ending contest, coach MacDougall calls it "Devastating."

But as Scarlett O'Hara stated in a famous film of the early 20th century, "Tomorrow IS another Day." And tomorrow has arrived for the determined, battle-tested 2017 Lady Lancers with this spring season, which they are slated to get under way officially next Monday, April 10, at home against those arch-rivals from Pinkerton Academy.

Senior Lizzie Niven and junior Emily Nelson will share the catching work, junior Ila Brown and twin senior sisters Ali and Andi Nelson will be centerpieces for the Lady Lancers in their pitching roles, Ali and junior Sarah Fawcett will share time at first base, and Junior Cassidy Raza had a perfectly deadly focus on the ball while batting during a recent LHS softball practice in the school's gym.

Fawcett will also get some time in at designated hitter.

Moving further around the diamond, senior Val Shay will play second base, her fellow 12th grader Katrina Rivard will reside at shortstop, and senior Liz DeVoss gets to handle the hot shots down at the hot corner.

Juniors Lauren Misiasek and Cassidy Raza will be pivotal players in the outfield, and then there's the one fresh face in the fold.

"Our only newcomer is Gia Komst, who is a promising freshman who will serve as a back-up catcher but primarily as an outfielder," said MacDougall.

The Lady Lancers' mentor, who has been coaching in the LHS softball program for more than three decades and served as the Londonderry varsity coach for much of that time, keeps showing his love for the game and his athletes by coming back season after season after retiring from his math teaching post at Londonderry High a handful of years ago. And he makes no bones about what the vital factors are for his crew this spring as the 2017 contingent aims to bag the first state championship in program history.

"The keys are pitching, to be shared by the Nelson twins and Ila, and staying healthy," he said. "We should be able to play great defense and get above-average hitting."

- PROVIDER ON CALL - PARKINSON'S DISEASE

Parkinson's disease develops gradually, often starting with a barely noticeable tremor in just one hand. But while tremor may be the most well-known sign of Parkinson's disease, the disorder also commonly causes a slowing or freezing of movement. Friends and family may notice that your face shows little or no expression and your arms don't swing when you walk. Speech often becomes soft and mumbling. Parkinson's symptoms tend to worsen as the disease progresses. While there is no cure for Parkinson's disease, many different types of medicines or procedures can treat its symptoms.

The symptoms of Parkinson's disease vary from person to person. Early signs may be subtle and can go unnoticed for months or years. Symptoms typically begin on one side of the body and usually remain worse on that side. Parkinson's signs and symptoms may include a tremor which is a characteristic shaking often beginning in a hand; slowed motion which over time may reduce your ability to initiate voluntary movement and may make even the simplest tasks difficult and time-consuming; rigid muscles often occurring in your limbs and neck which can be so severe that it limits the range of your movements and causes pain; impaired posture and balance that may become stooped as a result of Parkinson's disease; loss of automatic movements such as blinking, smiling and/or swinging your arms when you walk; speech changes where you may speak more softly, rapidly or in a monotone, sometimes slurring or repeating words, or hesitating before speaking; or dementia occurring in the later stages of Parkinson's disease.

Many symptoms of Parkinson's disease result from the lack of a chemical messenger, called dopamine, in the brain. This occurs when the specific brain cells that produce dopamine die or become impaired. But researchers still aren't certain about what sets this chain of events in motion. Some theorize that genetic mutations or environmental toxins may play a role in Parkinson's disease.

Risk factors for Parkinson's disease include age, heredity, sex or exposure to toxins. See your doctor if you have any of the symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease. Although Parkinson's disease can sometimes be difficult to pin down, getting an accurate diagnosis is the key to starting appropriate treatment that may help delay or manage symptoms for years.

The defenders include seniors Sami Lecaroz and Faye Brown, junior Isabella Bourque, and sophomore Samantha Leclair, and goalies Kaitlyn Marchant (a senior) and Morgan Brutus (sophomore).

"Just from the growth I have seen until now, I can see us being in the hunt for a title this season," said coach Walden. "I talk to the team about getting the program back to the days when we were winning three titles in four years. I have great expectations for the girls this year."

The new head coach and his Lady Lancers will get their 2017 season officially under way next Tuesday, April 11, with a battle against the Bishop Guertin Lady Cardinals in Nashua. But that's if the weather cooperates.

Coffee House Generates, Fun, Music and Education

Londonderry High School hosted a Coffee House in the school's café recently with dozens of students performing their musical talents to those attending. The school was joined by The New England School of Communications, from Husson University, Bangor, Maine where NESCom students worked with Video Production students from LHS to produce a live broadcast of the show. After each performance interviews were conducted by students to sharpen the skills of videographers as well as those conducting the interviews.

Top Ten Students Announced

The following students are the academic Top 10 for the Londonderry High School Class of 2017.

Principal Jason Parent made the announcement in the March 30 School Board meeting.

The seniors have earned cumulative weighted grade point averages of 4.4 or higher after seven calculated semesters of schooling, and are as follows:

Isabella Ziolek, 10th; Brian Frechette, ninth; Christopher Zaino, eighth, and also a National Merit Scholar finalist; Alexa May, seventh; Elise Goodspeed, sixth; Declan Hotter, fifth; Samantha Mauceri, fourth; Lindsey Guenther, third; Kiersten Hoglund, Salutatorian; and Alena Pursel, Valedictorian.

They will be honored at a Top Ten Dinner, during the school Baccalaureate ceremony, and at graduation.

Chairman Dan Lekas asked Parent how a student could earn a 4.4 GPA, and Parent said it was because of the number of Advanced Placement and Honors courses these students took. The AP and Honors classes are weighted 5 instead of 4, Parent said.

"Galileo" Library Stop

A living history performance, "The Starry Messenger," will be held Thursday, April 27, at 7 p.m. in the Leach Library, Londonderry. Mike Francis will be the presenter. Francis will enact a dramatic, fun-filled adaptation of Galileo's short treatise "Siderius Nuncius." As Galileo dressed in 17th-century costume, Francis will give a public lecture on Galileo's most recent discoveries made using his newly-devised spyglass. Audience members are invited to participate in Galileo's many experiments and demonstrations. This program is free and open to the public with seating limited to the first 90 individuals. It will be held in the library's lower-level meeting room.

Light refreshments will be served. For more information, call the library at 432-1132 or 432-1127.

Hear it from Our Advertisers First...

"We appreciate what Nutfield publishing has done for my farm over the last few years. We started our orchard business Hazelton Orchards in Chester NH in 2010. The Tri-Town times covered our opening as news which helped to kick start our retail business in Chester. We started as a small pick your own operation and had a small pushcart for apples and peaches in our driveway. Since that beginning we have increased our retail by moving into a building to become more of a full service farm store. The pick your own sales also have greatly increased. I believe this is in no small part due to the advertising we have done with Nutfield Publishing and their coverage of us as a local farm business. Recently we opened Plummer Farm, our choose and cut Christmas tree farm in Londonderry. As part of this we constructed an old fashioned post and beam building designed and built by Jesse Remington High School of Candia NH. Once again Nutfield Publishing showed up and covered the construction process with photos and an article. When time came to open the Christmas tree farm to the public we placed ads and the response exceeded our expectations. We think that the success of these ventures is due in no small part to Nutfields Publishings support of our local business."
