Editorial Let the Sun Shine In

Open and transparent govern- the government does things behind ment - you could call it the battle cry of community newspapers.

That's what the public deserves from its officials, on the local, state and national level. And providing information about the doings of government at the local level is a job this newspaper continues to take seriously.

A reminder that government business conducted in the open is at the heart of a democracy. If we don't know what our officials are doing, we don't have the information to hold them accountable. And the more information we have, the better.

Knowledge, as the saying goes, is power. And that power is not something to be held close to the chest by politicians; it belongs in the open, available to everyone, especially to those who put politicians in office and depend on them for services, fair budgeting and just plain listening to the will of the people.

The key, of course, is open access to meetings and records. We hear a lot about government transparency on the national level; it's at least as important at the town and school level, where decisions have more immediate impact on our pocketbooks and our lives.

Open government means newspapers, if they're doing their job, must act as watchdogs, asking the uncomfortable questions, getting the information, and providing it to their readers. This is very hard to do when closed door. And if documents are not readily made available, the state's Right to Know process is at the ready for anyone to use.

The "Your Right to Know." That's the heart of what government is all about. As a citizen in a democracy, you have the right to know how your government operates, and your elected officials have the obligation, except in carefully spelled out specific situations, to conduct their business in the open.

Sure, it's a lot easier for officials to discuss public business in private, which they do, where negotiations and off-the-cuff comments and hypothetical situations can be aired in a controlled atmosphere. But that's not the way things are supposed to work.

Discussion is to be done in public. Being in public office isn't supposed to be easy, and it requires following the rules, whether you like them or not, sometime officials make up rules as they go along. Making it hard for the public to find out what's going on is playing loose with open government.

That's why we report the details of what's been discussed. Then it's up to all citizens to get involved and make sure their voices are heard.

So in the midst of it all, we're happy to do our part to let the sun shine in all parts of town government.

Response to Traitor in the White House

To the Editor,

Reading the response Independent I agree with written last week, I thought to myself Eureka; the Lies and Corruption, someone gets it! However, reading further, I then thought; well not so much. Yes, Politics in America has hit a new low. I can't help but think the writers words "Ignorant" and Lies" is exactly what got us here in the first place!

It is true there is a something under attack; it is the "War on the Media". I don't think anyone would disagree with this. However, this would not apply to one particular news media outlet, the it might lead to China one whose symbol is an No doubt, this is going to animal, known for its "Cunning Trickery". I would also take exception to the "Positives are rarely accentuated". I remember countless times the media as a whole (again with the exception of the Cunning Trickster network) providing a monthly report of the recovery which followed almost a straight curve from 10% unemployment rate to a 4.8% unemployment rate. All the while this one particular network claiming it was false, including one particular orange haired ignorant Clown shouting FAKE. Don't get me wrong; getting to 3.9% from 4.8% is a good thing. Many would say it is a natural progression of a curve starting in 2009. I guess we would have to call these people informed? I do however find it laughable this same Ignorant clown uses the same reporting methods to tout the 3.9 % news.

Further, I believe the Mueller team and the Collective media are doing a fantastic job of exposing as you put it: which keep people ignorant of "the real truth".

Question: If there were a country where it leadership and followers for that matter, were unified, in that all other than what is now State run media, should be shut down? I am quite sure in any other context, your answer would be: this only could happen in a dictatorship.

proval of any new 55+ housing if the percentage of such housing in town exceeds the percentage of 55+ residents. Mailloux shared that based on the latest census data available from 2016, the town had a total of 8,218 housing units in 2016, with the total (existing and proposed) age restricted units accounting for 9.2% of the current supply. In comparison, the population 55 years and older was 6,884 or 27.9% of the total. Thus, the limitation on the number of elderly housing units is not in effect. Interestingly, data shows that the growth of age-restricted housing outpaces the growth in the percentage of 55+ residents. From 2016 to 2017, the number of 55+ units (existing and proposed) increased from 631 to 755, an increase of 20%. At the same time, the number of 55+ residents increased by just 8%.

During board Chairman Art Rugg the age 62+ Sanborn suggested that the town may need to review the housing density allowed in 55+ developments. He added that the biggest complaint he hears from residents is that the 55+ units are too expensive. Member Chris Davies suggested that perhaps developments should only get the allowance for increased housing density if the units are deemed Soares wondered what affordable.

grams did not have class- Londonderry sticks with rooms addition, In around 2008, the district revamped the special education programs to keep more students in the district.

Since special education programs take more space than is required for conventional students. the overall student capacity of the school decreased. Curro stressed that school capacity cannot be measured by what a fire marshal might say is the maximum capacity because how the space is used by various programs impact the total number of students that can fit.

In exploring ways handle the growing kindergarten and elementary space needs, the school district looked at a few options. One included an expansion of Moose Hill to add 6 classrooms of capacity for a rough cost of $3.5. This assumes that half-day kindergarten. If Londonderry moved to full day kindergarten then a major expansion would be required at an estimated cost of $10.9M.

Another option was to add a second floor to Moose Hill and move all first graders there, so that the school would host LEEP, kindergarten and first grade. This would alleviate the pressure on the elementary schools for several years, also at rough cost of $10M.

If the idea to move first graders to Moose Hill did not move forward, then Curro says that a new elementary school will be needed in the next five years to accommodate the growing student population. The cost to build is estimated at $26M. In addition, the district ball parked the cost to run a new school at $5M per year.

proposed school capital were $15M for a variety of school renovations across the district, including updates to the nonclassroom spaces at the Middle School. This also option also includes expansion of Moose Hill. The Middle School was updated in 1986, but these updates did not include areas such as the cafeteria, gym, library or multi-purpose room. Curro noted that the $15M could be substantially less depending on the chosen solution to alleviate the anticipated kindergarten and elemenschool capacity tary

Farrell asked if the district would be considering redistricting as an option to alleviate space constraints. Curro said yes, but with North and South Schools near capacity the impact of redis-

issues

Also included in the tricting would be limited.

Farrell shared that while he was not against any of the asks, he did not want to increase the tax burden on residents, so he would want to see an increase in commercial revenue to pay for the increased spending. With the help of Finance Director Doug Smith, he estimated that if the full $62 M had to be covered the town would need to develop an additional $230M in commercial valuation, or roughly what FW Webb provides.

Alternatively, if residential taxpayers footed the entire bill, it would add about $2.50 per thousand of assessed value to the tax bill. For a $400K house that would be $800/year.

Curro pointed out that in 10 years, all the current mentary school district bonds will be paid off. He estimated that the debt coming off books will pay for most of new bond payment costs for Moose Hill expansion, the district-wide renovation and the auditorium.

The CIP also discussed a request for the long-discussed and debated new auditorium for the high school at a $10M price tag. CIP member Mary Wing Soares was the lone committee member pushing to up the priority on this item. Other members felt that the space issues and the schools was something that should be tackled first.

In the end, the CIP recommended the town common and police generator spending in FY2020, an expansion of Moose Hill in FY2021, the districtwide school updates in FY2023, the auditorium in FY2024 and the new eleschool in FY2025.

once and for all.

An amendment is looking to be made to the Exit 4A Road Construction Project, so more money can be allocated to finish the highway exit. The asking amount is $665,735.46 (this $332,867.73 per community) and brings the total amount for Londonderry to $1,499,466.27. This is not, however, the total expenditure for the 4A project. The representative from Fuss and O'Neil Inc. assured the Council that this asking amount will remain under the five million dollar budget.

Councilor Ted Combes questioned why this project took an extra fifteen months for completion. According to the representative from Fuss and O'Neil, it all came down to the traffic model. By putting this model together, it was found that a significant amount of effort was needed to meet the requirements of issues found by the model. The model was built to predict traffic flow all the way to the year of 2040, so additional preparations needed to be made to accommodate this traffic flow. As of today, the project is set for completion in March of 2019 for the exit to be open and in working condition for public use. Vice-Chairman of the Council Joe Green commented that all parties agreed on a price and it seemed that someone did when it came to the traffic said.

study. "I don't know why the agreement can't be honored and why we have to pay for that oversight. I don't think it's fair and I think that people should honor that part of the agreement." Green said. Chairman John Farrell felt that this conversation has been going on for much too long. "I have a great deal of respect for the math involved and everything else to come up with the right calculations to do the right thing, but not do their due diligence we're at the end." Farrell

The Department of Transportation also had their doubts about making the amendment to this project to ask for more money and raised the question of "Is this justified?" Both representatives assured the Council that they were several elements that came into play that were not known at the time of the original agreement. Farrell remarked how it was not fair to come back to the Council and ask for more money from the community.

"I am so proud to be part of an organization that cares so much about the communities we live and work in." said Brochu.

This year's campaign goes hand-in-hand with Feeding America's initiative of calling out September as Hunger Action Month across the country. Feeding America is the nation's largest domestic hunger-relief organization, a network 200 food banks strong. As rates of food insecurity hold steady at the highest levels to date, Feeding America's network of food banks has risen to help meet the need.

According to the Feeding America website, through the help of donations, the organization is able to serve more than 12 million children, 7 million seniors, and is able to operate a mobile pantry program through 86% of its food banks to serve rural families in need.

Brochu stated that the reason the company chose to work with the NH Food Bank is because the organization fits Verani's focus on helping the community.

addition to providing food insecure individuals and families with nutritious food, the organization also helps to fight the root causes of hunger by empowering individuals to learn new skills, enabling them to become more self-sufficient and helping them to improve their quality of life. The NH Food Bank offers a variety of programs to help reach as many people as possible. For more information, visit www.nhfoodbank.org.

In addition to the always welcomed canned vegetables and fruits, Brochu mentioned that a lot of food pantries are in dire need of nonperishable proteins, such as canned tuna, canned chicken, peanut butter, and beans. Brochu hopes to collect enough of these items so that she may potentially give more of these to the needy local organizations as well.

The public is invited to drop off nonperishable food items at any of Verani's offices from August 15 through September 15. Brochu stated that there is a collection box right in the Londonderry branch's lobby, and donors can simply drop their items in the box and be on their way, knowing that their contribution will go towards helping a family in need.

Londonderry High Produces Fine Coaches, Some at Pinkerton

CHRIS PANTAZIS LONDONDERRY TIMES

The Londonderry High School Class of 1983 produced no less than three coaches who later went on to lead New Hampshire Division I high school sports teams to multiple state championships. And two of the three did so as coaches at rival Pinkerton Academy.

LHS '83 graduates Kerry Boles and Rob Daziel have coached Pinkerton boys' soccer and girls' lacrosse contingents respectively for lengthy spans and led both to multiple state crowns. The other member of their graduating class - Tim Dudley - led the Dover High girls' softball squad to backto-back state titles several years ago.

Back when Boles became the head guy for the PA boys' soccer program during the 1990's it was of passing interest to folks on both sides of the great rivalry. A former Londonderry Lancer athlete and graduate making the move into both coaching and teaching at the rival school was of some interest to some folks. But since then, well, the Derry school has had quite a few former Lancers step into teaching and high coaching roles and enjoy considerable success.

With the recent addition of former Londonderry High student-athlete and varsity football coach Jon Rich to the Pinkerton varsity football coaching staff and a physical education and health teaching job, there are now six former LHS student-athletes serving as head or assistant coaches at Londonderry's rival school.

Along with Boles, Daziel, and LHS Class of 1998 grad Rich, there are Pinkerton varsity baseball coach Steve Campo (Class of 2003), varsity softball coach Kristen Abbott (Class of 2005), and most recent grad and assistant volleyball and softball coach Megan Hersey-Evans.

Hersey is a bit more than a handful of years out of LHS and a new history and psychology teacher at the academy. Campo is a middle school teacher in Derry,

Daziel, who played his entire LHS lax career for New Hampshire high school legend Tom Sawyer before moving on to a fine lacrosse career for coach Don Emerson at New England College in Henniker, became the Pinkerton varsity girls' lacrosse coach in 2012 and has led that program to no less than three state titles in seven years. Former Lancer Gridders Testing Mettle on the College Level

Olks who have been ◀ involved in the Londonderry High School football program since its inception have understandably quite taken considerable pride in the graduates who have gone on to play that intense sport in college. And this summer there are a bunch of LHS grads who are testing their mettle on collegiate gridirons throughout the New England region.

Among the most noteworthy is former LHS and Granite State grid star Eric Fairweather, who begins his senior season on a Saint Anselm College squad which is looking to overcome a pretty awful 2017 campaign.

Alas, Mr. Fairweather knows all about rebounding from lost seasons after suffering a serious ankle injury in the Hawks' season-opening game during his sophomore campaign of 2016 and spending the rest of that season, quite frustratingly, ties to scamper and sprint on the sidelines.

Fairweather carried 103-for-222 attempts with the ball 163 times, the eighth-most carries in a single season in team history. Fairweather created a considerable amount of excitement in the Saint A's program in his freshman campaign of 2015 fresh off of his exceptional senior high school season - when he stepped in for several injured Hawks' veteran quarterbacks and showed plenty.

The ex-LHS stalwart appeared in eight games, starting the final seven of the season.

He was 112-of-187 for 1,058 yards passing, posting a 59.9% completion percentage and tossing seven touchdowns. He ran the ball 107 times for 716 yards and eight touchdowns, running for 100 yards or more three times that season. His career-best college rushing numbers in a single game came against Stonehill that fall, with Fairweather rushing for 177 vards on 18 carries.

One of Fairweather's former Londonderry High teammates who also played for a struggling college grid squad in 2017 was Chris Komst, who battled on the offensive line for the 2-8 Saint Vincent College contingent in Latrobe, Pa.

Komst appeared in seven of his squad's 10 games as a college freshman last year after serving as a two-year starter the Londonderry High and then a senior captain plays during the UNE cers. He is majoring in history at the Pennsylvania ances was an eight-tackle school.

Former LHS defensive standout Zac Garside begins his second season on the Plymouth State University football squad after showing quite a bit as a freshman during the 2017 season.

Garside stood out as a defensive lineman for the PSU crew, notching 19 tackles and 2.5 sacks and gobbling up two fumbles for a Panther contingent which went 9-2 overall and 7-1 in its conference. Garside is a business major.

One of the PSU coaches during the fine 2017 campaign and several previous seasons was Londonderry High grad and former standout lineman Tom Manley, who has now moved on to Western Connecticut State in Danbury to be that squad's new offensive line coach.

Meanwhile, out in Biddeford, Maine, former Londonderry High grid stalwart Nick Scarfo and his University of New England Nor'Easters' football teammates are making history for a second straight year this summer.

The linebacking Scarfo played on the very first UNE grid squad during its inaugural, pre-varsity season last year. And this summer and fall he and his Nor'Easters will play their first, full-fledged varsity campaign.

As was often the case during his high school with some big defensive month.

The former Lancer is working toward a communications degree at the Maine school.

Also in Maine, recent LHS graduates and former football stalwarts Connor Dubois and Ben Johnson are working toward playing time as freshmen on a Husson University Eagles' squad in Bangor which went 10-2 last year and a perfect 7-0 in the Eastern Collegiate Football Conference.

The 2017 Husson contingent graduated some 15 players, so there may be jobs for Dubois and Johnson to work their way into.

Also in Maine, justgraduated former Lancer versatile gridder Pat Zepf steps into a Bowdoin College (Brunswick) Bulldogs' program which suffered through a weak, 0-9 campaign last year and is 0-17 over the last two vears.

Other 2018 Londonderry High and Lancer football grads who are battling for jobs on college squads right now include Mike McAlister at Franklin Pierce University in Rindge and Alex Boucher at Western New England University in Springfield, Mass. Both of those young men played for the Granite State squad in the 2018 Shrine Maple Sugar Bowl Game career, Scarfo came up in Vermont earlier this
