ion Discusses Landscaping Changes onservation Comr

LONDONDERRY TIMES

The topic of encouraging a more diverse ecosystem in the community arose when the Londonderry Conservation Commission met for its May meeting. The Commission noticed how Woodmont Commons lacked a diverse array of flowering plants or native fauna in the development's green spaces. "I was appalled at how little lawn there was, the small area of lawn, and how much of it was green grass with the truck from a golf course grass company, and the landscaping was pathetaccording to Deb ic" Lievens. "There's so little vegetation over there that the critters can use." She asked how the Commission might encourage the use of ecologically beneficial plants at Woodmont and in similar developments.

he commission also placed a focus on vegetative buffers to protect wetlands and local water sources. Native plants have always been a preference in these areas instead of only planting grass.

An issue raised was that any make recommendations to the town planner for an update on regulations might be impossible at this time. Town manager Colleen Mailloux recently left Londonderry for a federal job. As a town planner is required to make formal changes to the landscaping code. and legal process cannot begin until the town hires a replacement. Any legal change is unlikely in the immediate future.

Instead, Eugene Harrington suggested developing "a handout from the Conservation Commission that says, when you go before the Commission, these are the sorts of things, this is the guidance" to look for when planting. Any suggestions through a pamphlet would be nonbinding, only intended as advice. All members were in agreement that requesting changes to landscapes is a worthwhile thing to do for the Several problems also arose regarding a focus on native plants. Under current regulations nonnative plants such as purple lilac are commonlv found in public spaces. ters are going to eat True native plants are also difficult and expensive to find thanks to hybridization. Focus remains on plants friendly to the local ecosystem instead with exceptions possible for non-native or hybrid plants favored by NH wildlife.

The main goal of regulatory change and advice is to encourage plants friendly to the local ecosystem. Responding to potential concerns from the public, Deb noted that "people obviously don't want to put plants in that critfrom their gardens, but that is a healthy ecosystem." She reminded everybody that the goal of the new advice is to protect the local environment. Aggressive, invasive plants that provide little to the ecosystem have been an ongoing issue.

Commission members also considered asking others outside of Londonderry for advice on possible solutions while encouraging public response to any pamphlets. Deb promised to look into new ideas that can be used for later discussion.

Jeff Kevan from TF gh, and a gas station Moran who was representing the owners exand two diesel fueling plained that the previous discussion in front of the Commission was mostly in regards to the architecture.

He explained that they have made different changes to the plans at the recommendation of the Heritage Commission since their last meeting.

Kevan said that they proposed having LED fonts for the price sign for gas so that way they can change the prices remotely. He explained that they have gotten away from the old signs, which required that the prices on the signs be changed manually.

Kevan also pointed out that they softened some of the proposed colors and put up sold signing at the main entry of the building, which were suggestions from the Commission during their previous meeting.

He explained that the proposal for the freestanding sign is that it would be as big as the original sign.

It was pointed out by Associate Planner Laura Gandia that because of the district that they are in they are required to have a monument sign.

"That would be for the free standing sign," said Gandia.

She also pointed out that they have a lot of excessive signage on their plan and that they may need to seek relief from the Zoning Board of Adjustment in order to have what they are proposing.

"If you want all those signs you'll need a variance," said Heritage Commission Vice Chair Arthur Rugg.

Kevan said that they could make it a monument at the base portion of the sign and keep the rest of the sign similar to what they are proposing.

One question asked was if they were planning on having trash cans on site near the gas pumps.

It was explained that they would be in the different rows where the pumps are and also they will have them at the tire filling station.

Gandia said that right now they would be allowed one free standing sign and one wall sign. She said that if they were approved without having any stipulations then they wouldn't get a chance to review it again after the Zoning Board approves any variances for the number of signs.

The Heritage Commission approved the monument sign and the wall signage above the main entrance. If they want to get other signage they will need to go to the Zoning Board of Adjustment for relief.

School Board Discusses Policy bling Agenda Iteı

uring the May 24 School Board meeting one of the agenda items under old business was in regards to having a policy in place to allow a school board member to request that they delay a vote on an agenda item to the following meeting.

The idea was brought up during the last meeting by School Board member Bob Slater.

School Board Vice Chair Sara Loughlin said that when they have their reorganization meetings in March and they have new school board members she thinks they that it is okay to ask for more time if they need it to make a decision on an item and they more time to think about it or need more information.

"I would ask Board members to please speak up and say that you're not comfortable with something," said Loughlin Loughlin said she didn't think they needed to put a formal policy in place regarding it.

Loughlin said that she thinks that people would be respectful in agreeing to delay it if someone on the board asks.

School Board member Kevin Gray said that he thinks that talking about it and putting it should explain to them out there to future new members will be good.

> Loughlin noted that some topics and items are fine sensitive which may need to be voted on right away.

> "We just need to be sensitive of topics like that," said Loughlin.

> She also noted that it is important to reach out for more information in advance of meetings.

> Slater said that he thought that it would be okay to move forward without a policy.

> During the meeting Director of Pupil Services Kim Carpinone asked the Board permission to purchase defibrillators for the schools.

> > Carpinone said that they currently have 15 AEDs onsite including two mobile AED packs in the athletic offices. She said that two have died, three are recalled and the remainder but for one are at the end of life.

She explained that they haven't had an organized "life cycle" for the AEDs and that her proposal was to have one going forward.

"I am proposing we codify our AED management system and begin with a systemic replacement cycle, contract for service and monthly systems check," said Carpinone.

Carpinone said that they have contacted three AED vendors and quotes for replacement AED's as well as any recommendations needed.

"Both CPRSAFE Mc-Gregor Memorial EMS and Life Support Systems came on site, walked each building to assess our needs and provide quotes for the machines, cabinets, installation, take away and maintenance contracts," said Carpinone. "AEDservice America would not come on site without a fee so we did not pursue them as a possible vendor."

She said the representatives from the two companies both agreed that "all AEDs needed replacement except for a newer one purchased in 2018 at asked them to provide LHS. Both recommended that the Zoll AED Plus or AED 3 are the best product for our needs. I recommend the AED 3 due to the integrated pediatric rescue pads."

> Carpinone said that they both recommended additional AEDs at the high school and moving one at the middle school.

> She said they recommended using CPRSAFE McGregor Memorial EMS for their AED needs.

> Slater said he thought it made sense to have the fire department come into the schools and look at what they have to see if they have any recommendations, which Carpinone agreed with.

Commission Discuss Changes to Previously Approved Site

HENRY GREENBAUM LONDONDERRY TIMES

The Conservation Commission discussed an amendment to a previously approved project during their Tuesday, May 24 meeting.

Brain Pratt of Fuss & O'Neill presented the amendment on behalf of the clients who own the lot addressed 3 Akira Way.

"Back in 2004, we got approval for a two-level facility. It had access off of Technology Drive and then access to the lower level off of Akira Way," said Mr. Pratt. "The developer was never able to construct it. It was not cost effective so in 2014 we came back with a modified site plan which industrial building...that was approved in 2014 and it has been sitting there waiting for the right person to buy it and build it."

Pratt further explained that the developer recently sold it to the Ranger Development Corps., who wanted to make some minor amendments to the plan before they build the industrial park. These amendments include reducing the square footage down to 7,200 square feet, connecting the driveway around the entire building instead of it being a dead end, and reducing the frontage of the property by five feet.

Making the driveway was a 9,600 square foot connect around the building allowed the developers to cut back on the turnarounds on either side which will make it easier for cars to navigate through the lot.

> Reducing the frontage also allows them to reduce the total area of the pavement by 2,300 square feet. This, in turn, prevents the property from impeding on the infiltration of water and underlying soil surrounding the area.

Pratt said, "Nothing else changes. No changes to the storm water patterns. There is a detention basement in the back and a small detention basement in the front. They are all connected together so all of the water ends up going to the back. That is where the storm water flows now so we have a reduction in peak flow that was originally approved."

He continued to explain that with the new amendments, the peak flow of the storm water around the site would be reduced even further. There are also no wetlands on site or within 75 feet of the property.

It was pointed out by the Commission that the plan needs to be updated before it can be approved despite it being merely a reduction in size as that plan was originally approved for the previous developer and not the current one.

Mr. Pratt said, "If a new landscape architect designs it he has to stamp it. He has to certify it. He has to research the shrubs. He has to look at the ordinances. It is a decent amount of work espescially when this company is out of business and the plan is essentially the same."

When asked if he was getting any guidance from the Planning Board Mr. Pratt explained that the design plan is currently under review and he is awaiting their feedback. The Conservation Commission agreed to hold off on approving the amendments once the Planning Board has given their feedback and so that Mr. Pratt has a chance to talk it over with his client.

Preventing Lyme Disease

If you're like me, you came to NH for the outdoor quality of life.

I have long loved getting out of the house and getting some fresh air. However, my relationship with the outdoors has changed since having been diagnosed with Chronic Lyme disease.

Lyme disease is an infection caused by Borrelia Burgdorferi, a spiral-shaped bacterium that looks and behaves like the bacteria that cause syphilis.

In observance of Lyme Disease Awareness Month, it's time for an annual refresh regarding ticks and Lyme disease.

Typically when a person first contracts Lyme disease, they will develop flu-like symptoms for about 7 - 21 days after the tick bite, with or without the Lyme disease can spread to most organ systems, including the heart and the central nervous system. Syphilis was nicknamed "The Great Masquerader" since it could develop symptoms that mimicked most any other disease. Today, it is Lyme disease that holds that title, since it too may appear to be like other illness.

Lyme disease can cause symptoms as serious as cardiac arrhythmias and even sudden cardiac arrest. It can cause neurological symptoms that often appear like Multiple Sclerosis or Parkinson's disease.

Aside from the flu-like symptoms, some other less obvious signs of Lyme include a buzzing or tingling sensation on the skin, a burning nerve pain, a great amount of joint pain, muscle pain and incredible muscle stiffness. Victims can experience a lot of "Brain fog," resulting in poor memory, difficulty with language skills, and in some cases even out right dementia.

Though they are most prevalent in the summer, ticks can bite every month of the year. However, there are a number of ways to prevent being bit-Permethrin, a common synthetic insecticide, can be applied to clothing to make them tick resistant. There is also DEET, or Lemon Eucalyptus Oil can be used as insect repellent for the Wearing light and bright-colored clothing can help make it easier to spot ticks. Tucking the bottoms of pant legs into socks can prevent the ticks from climbing and hiding on legs. Clothes can also be put in a dryer for 10 minutes on high heat after coming in from outside to kill ticks.

If a tick becomes latched, remove it as soon as possible. The tick should then be placed in a sandwich bag with a small piece of damp paper towel with the date and name of the person who was bitten marked on the bag. It should then be brought to a doctor or sent to a lab to see if it was a carrier of Lyme disease or other infections such as Bartonella, Ehrlichia, Babesia or Anaplasma.

Despite everything, I still love to be outdoors. But now I usually do so in long pants sprayed with permathrin. and double up with a natural insect repellent for good measure. I check for ticks even if I haven't been outside.

Enjoy the fresh air this season, but be sure take preventative measures from tick bites and seek prompt treatment if necessary. Stay safe

Running for State Rep

To the editor.

What matters most? For me, it's freedom: to live in peace, to raise up strong families, to work and play and pass along that freedom to the next generation. That's why it's absolutely critical for NH to elect a robust majority of true conservatives, public servants who understand the Constitution was written to limit the power of government over our lives.

This week, I signed on as a candidate for State Representative for Londonderry. My goal is to earn your vote and be your voice in Concord, so together we can move NH forward in freedom. As a first-time candidate, I'll need your help this summer, so please get involved! Visit www.laurpaign. Thank you.

Wiley Hill/High Range

To the editor,

This will only be of interest if you live near the referenced intersection.

I read two articles about a development on 8 Wiley Hill Road, and although I've lived nearby for 37 years, I could not follow the information. Of course, a plan drawing would have clarified it.

I went to the May 18 meeting, and although no discussion was held, I did meet my neighbors, close abutters to the concerning project, those with great cona4londonderry.com for cerns. They explained more information about everything, and perhaps key issues, to donate or the clarification should to volunteer for my cambe in the paper, where I saw the articles.

> First, all the intrigues about frontage, setbacks, and the guardrail are on High Range.

Nothing is happening at 8 Wiley Hill Road, but that home is on property that extends around back and east to High Range and west to the end of Mont Vernon. The 100.58 feet in guestion is just south of #97 and 99 High Range Road.

The home on the corner is the one that is crowded on the north by the developers proposed homesite location. The guardrail on the east side of HRR blocks the view southward around the curve from the proposed new driveway off HRR, unless a driver is in a very high vehicle. The purpose of the guardrail is obvious.

ZBA Approves Variance for Home on Woodside Drive

ALEX MAM LONDONDERRY TIMES

Zoning Board of Adjustment meeting the Board heard an application for two different variances at 8 Woodside Drive.

The first variance request was to allow the encroachment of 11 feet into the 40 foot front setback in order to put an addition on their house for a family room. The second was to allow the encroachment of 15 feet into the 100 foot Planned Residential Development on their property.

setback in order to construct the family room.

It was explained by uring the May 18 the owner Justin Soucy that there are already existing houses in their neighborhood that have the addition "bump out" and they are looking to do something similar.

Soucy told the Board that it was his understanding that the ordinance was put into place as a way to maintain green space in the neighborhood since they are narrower lots.

He argued that they have enough green space property is all lawn," said Soucy, saying that his property is about an acre.

Soucy told the Board that there will be plenty of green space still if their proposed addition is approved.

It was explained by Soucy that he doesn't think that the surroundproperty values would be diminished by allowing the addition. He said that he talked to some neighbors who think it will actually increase their values.

"I don't think the properties surrounding "Almost my entire it will be diminished," said Soucy.

> Soucy said that they will also be making a number of improvements is kind of out of the to their property if the addition is approved including redoing some of the landscaping, putting in new walkways and also putting in a new driveway.

Soucy said that the current driveway is where the proposed addition is going to be.

It was explained by Soucy that they wouldn't be able to expand on the back because they have their septic tank side their back door and after that is a leach field.

"Expanding that way question," said Soucy.

It was also pointed out by Soucy that they have an irregular shaped property compared to their neighbors and that some of them are able to expand in different spots of their property which isn't the case for them and one of the reasons why their property is unique.

Soucy said that the house is already 31 feet away from the road as it is. He said that the pro-there which is right out- posed addition is ultimately lined up with the house currently.

> One of Soucy's neighbors wrote a letter in support of the variances being granted with a number of the other neighbors signing the letter in support as well.

> No one spoke or provided testimony that were in opposition against the proposed applicant.

The ZBA ultimately approved both of the variances.

The next Londonderry ZBA meeting is slated to take place on June 15 at 7 p.m.

Casey said that one thing that they have heard from concert goers is the lack of accessibility for those with mobility impairments. He said that last year they posted handicap parking signs so people could park closer to the band stage.

Since a lot of people ignored the signs last year Casey said that they were looking at having a police detail for the event. Caey said they get permission from the town before posting the signs.

was brought up to help recruit new employees is by advertising their job openings in the local newspaper.

"They have been doing that for some time," said Laliberte.

Laliberte said that he spoke to Human Resources and they said that they stopped it because they thought they weren't cost about $400 a week. He said that it would be something they monitor closely and would let the school board know how they are doing on results from it.

Laliberte said that a positive climate culture was brought up as being important during their previous meeting.

"We will include a getting good results but district-wide goal that said they would try it will focus on the adagain. He said it would vancement of a positive climate and culture within the staff for next school year," said Laliberte. "This will be developed K-12 by the Administrative Team with input from the respective building staff."

> Laliberte said that the HR staff has also contacted the 55 and older communities. He said that they are in the process of putting together a presentation and brochures "that highlight opportunities for retirees to work within the schools.'

It was also noted by Laliberte that one of the suggestions that he has heard is opening a childcare center for staff members within the school district. He explained that it would be very appealing for some people who want to work in the school district.

He explained however that opening it in the district would be complicated and would need approvals from the state but said they would be looking into it.

"I think it's worth diving into," said Laliberte.

School Board member Scott Slater asked how often they are going to advertise in the newspaper for job openings.

Laliberte explained that their plan was to advertise each week.

Slater said that he thinks they could do every other week until they get new numbers for possible salaries, noting that their biggest issue is with their salaries.

Laliberte said that he plans on discussing more updates regarding the recruitment and retention of employees during the June 21 school board meeting.

to fuel those vehicles moving forward" Wilcox stated, "and we're seeing growth within our own state with registrations and particularly in surrounding states." Many have been slow to purchase battery EVs partially due to a lack of charging stations outside major cities. She mentioned partnering with Vermont towns in addition to NH to build an unbroken line of charging infrastructure across rural parts of New England.

A major driving force has been the environmental benefits of electrical vehicles, which generate less pollution compared to gas-powered vehicles. However, the cost is also a factor in an era of higher prices for diesel and gasoline. The growth in choice for EVs has been seen in the commercial market with electric forklifts, school buses, and delivery vans.

Wilcox noted that there is no one-size-fitsall solution to EV infrastructure. The Department of Environmental Services is mainly looking into what is known as DC Fast Charging for road stops and on the highway to "facilitate long-distance travel, provide an alternative to home charging" Mid-High-Power AC chargers are slower but cheaper charging stations, better suited for smaller towns and in parking lots.

NH communities would not have to provide most funding for new charges thanks in part to the availability of state, federal, and private funding sources.

Any public road has federal funding, although DC Fast Chargers for interstate highways are a priority. The NH Department of Transportation routinely holds public hearings through Zoom, encouraging public input on how and where to spend money designed for EV infrastructure. Many factors including data-collection and charging standards remain undecided.

Even with funding for building new EV stations, there were a few questions. One was the possibility of tying the upcoming solar array into the charging stations. Several companies specialize in connecting solar panels to individual charging stations, indicating that such a thing is feasible depending on funding.

Another question involved the cost of charging a vehicle at a station. Some see rapidly growing prices on gas and worry that private distributors might increase the price of EV charging in the absence of regulation. As with infrastructure, legislation needs to catch up with the growth of EVs. "We're living in a technology age" stated Wilcox, and "it's very exciting to be on the cusp of all of this" with the growth of new EV technology.
